at home. Most of the knowledge which the north has of Georgia politics is gathered from gossip here, and from such incidents as occurred in the house yesterday. They believe these evidences rather than the representations of the press of the state, which they regard, in the language of Mr. Speer, as "ultra partisan." Reasoning thus, they conclude that as three of the Georgia.

"What opinion did you get of the south in your late tour through it?"

"I only confirmed the opinion I had long had. Let a line be drawn from a point on the Ohio river on the western edge of the blue grass region, around the western border of that district to Chattanooga, Tennessee; thence around the southerly end of the Apalachian chain by way of Atlanta, Georgia; thence northerly on the eastern edge of the Piedmont region to Virginia; thence by way of Lynchburg to Harper's Ferry, and thence by way of the Potomac and Ohio to the point of beginning and you have included an area equal to that of France, and nearly double that of Great Britain. It is not too much to say that in agricultural and mineral resources it exceeds Great Britain and France combined and is possessed of the finest climate to be found east of the Rocky mountains. The blue grass section alone could raise enough wheat without manure to feed Great Britain. It is a grand section, but has been until lately a railway desert, occapied over half its area by a sparse population clad in homespun garments. The curse of slavery having been removed from it and capital pouring into it under general invitation and inducement its future fills us with amazement. The cotton exposition will, we hope, give an impetus to development to the south and systematize and improve the vast energies now working within it."

October, a Herald representative asked him what he thought of the outlook of the enterprise.

"There is very thorough and wide-spread interest in the matter throughout New England," said he, "and there will be a large attendance and exhibition from this section. There will be at least $100,000 worth of stock that must be taken promptly, and whether New England will subscribe liberally to this stock or not will depend entirely upon the interest the south ern people show in the matter. Improvement cannot be forced upon a people from without, but if there is reason to believe that the south is sincerely interested in the that the south is sincerely interested in the exposition and the lessons it will teach there will be little trouble about the stock. I think the south is deeply in favor of it,

It think the south is deeply in favor of it, and I therefore expect that it will be a great success.

"There is one thing you may say with emphasis," said Mr. Atkinson, "and that is that there is great need of such an exposition. There is no great staple of the world so wastefully handled and prepared for market as cotton, unless it be sugar. Sugar still rests to a great extent under the blight of slavery, but that burden has been removed from cotton, and there is no reason why there should not be decided improvement in its culture and handling. I am satisfied that if cotton were properly packed and baled it would bring from one to three per cent more than it now brings, because then the buyer would be certain of the quantity and quality of what he was buying. If it were properly handled in the gin house and properly picked and carried to the gin, all of it that is now ginned below middling would command from two to five per cent. Atkinson went on to say, "whether or not I think the cotton factories of New England will gradually drift to the south. My reply is that the manufacture of cotton is a unit. Their Proposed Colonization in the Yesterday a reporter of THE CONSTITU-TION called at the office of Mayor English and had a short, but interesting interview ent these offices are scattered all over the city—the mayor's office is in one place, the city engineer in another, superintendent of water-works in another, city treasurer in another, with the remainder at the city hail. It is proposed to "colonize" there officials in some centrally located building and to get at the bottom facts, the mayor was visited by the reporter. He said:

"You see the officers are now very much scattered, and everything is arranged very inconvoniently. We want to get a large room in the central portion of the city, say between the capitol and Loyd street in one direction and Marietta and Alabama in the other and after dividing off a room for the council to put up neat raillings on both sides of the balance of the room and make offices for the city engineer, city clerk, marshal, tax receiver and collector, superintendent of water-works and myself. CHEATING AND SWINDLING.

Trial Before Judge Tanner's Court In Judge Tanner's court yesterday a warrant charging A. L. Lewis with cheatwarrant was procured by Frank Logan, of is city, and upon this paper Mr. Lewis was he departure of the Western and Atlantic passenger train for Chattanoga and detained until he gave bond for his ppearance before the justice who issued he warrant, for a preliminary trial, which the draft. The first was received and the last honored—the amount being five hundred and eighty dollars. Subsequently Mr. Logan telegraphed Mr. Lewis to ship him a car load of another grade of flour and in compliance with this request the second car load was consigned to Mr. Losan, and a draft for the amount drawn. But an, and a draft for the amount drawn. But n a few days Mr. Lewis was notified that Ir. Logan had declined to receive the flour. Mr. Logan had declined to receive the flour, and would not accept the draft.

Soon after this Mr. Lewis, who does quite a business with Atlanta commission merchants came to Atlanta. Since his arrival he has seen Mr. Logan and from him ascertained that he still had the first car load of flour on hand and that he wanted Mr. Lewis to repossess himself of it by repaying the five hundred and eighty dollars. This Mr. Lewis declined to do as flour had declined. During Mr. Lewis's stay in Atlanta Mr.

A mong other propositions he agreed to assume the ownership of the flour for which he had paid, if Mr. Lewis would reimburse him to the extent of seventy five dollars. But again Mr. Lewis declined, and yesterday completed his arrangements to leave for his home, but as we have said was arrested at the car shed and taken before Judge Tanner, when the warrant was procured and the trial set for eleven o'clock this morning. Mr. Lewis's bond was fixed at five hundred dollars and in a short time he was released, having secured satisfactory bondsmen. This is about Mr. Lewis's statement.

Mr. Logan had an abundance of evidence to sustain his charge. After the reporter had talked with Mr. Moyers a letter was sent him which contained the following language:

"He (Logan) claims that Mr. Lewis swindled him out of $580, and possesses the documents necessary to sustain the war rant which he has sued out against nim. If you insist on publishing an account of the difficulty, please do Mr. Logan the justice to mention this, and also that he declines to give details until after the trial, because his lawyer advises him so to do."

Mr. Logan is well known in Atlanta, being one of our most successful commiss on merchants and will carefully guard his own interest. Mr. Lewis is a stranger in our midst. He is an elderly gentlemen and presents a good appearance. He claims to be a square man. The result of the trial will be given in our next issue.

Miss Katie Putnam. Sunday evening, just as Miss Katie Putnam was boarding the train for Augusta, she was sanded the following note in a sealed envelope: Miss Katie Putnam: A large number of your admirers are very destrous of seeing you as "Len the Madcap," or "Little Nell," at the Saturda, makes, "Lettle Nell," at the Saturda, makes, "Lettle Nell," is preferred.

Miss Putnam requests.

Miss Putnam request too late for her to say that the note was received too late for her to comply, but had it been received in time she would have taken pleasure in complying with the request. Miss Putnam has many friends in Atlanta.

From Mr. James J. H. Gregory, Marblehead, Mass., we have received a copy of his annual illustrated, catalogue of warranied seeds. Mr. Gregory's seed growing facilities includes four farms, besides several tracts of land, located in three towns, and carried on under his own supervision. He grows one hundred and fifty varieties of vegetable seeds. Great care is used by him in selecting roots, bulbs, etc., for seed purposes. His seed are sent out under three warrants, that they shall be what they purport to be; that all money sent him as directed shall reach him, and that the seed ordered shall reach his customers.

Tony Denier's Humpty Dumpty. Yesterday and last night was a bad time for Humpty Dumpty. The elements are on another rampage, and people don't venture out unless they have business. The matinee yesterday was rather thinly attended, as was the performance last night, consequently, the entertainment was considerably cut down. However, enough was left to please the audience to a fair degree. There are in the troupe several good artists. George H. Adams, as clown, has many admirers, and the sparks brothers took right well. The great variety of the performance is its chief attraction.

A Gay Youth.

Gilbert Upshaw is the son of a colored merchant on Peters street. Gilbert has been interviewing the old man's cash drawer and lavishing the wealth upon Miss Collier, a Green's Ferry avenue damsel of ebony hue. A day or two ago this manipulator or the people's cash got away with fifteen dollars, which so enraged the parent that he has sworn out a warrant charging his son with larceny, and will presecute him. The arrest was made pesterday by Captain Starmes and Officer Deunard. A portion of the money was recovered.

A Paper Thief. For several days past Mr. S. M. Inman, who lives on Thompson street, has been missing his CONSTITUTION from his yard. A lookout was kept, which resulted in the arrest yesterday of Joseph Winn, a negro man, who will be tried to-day in Judge Tanner's court on a charge of larceny, Paper stealing is a nuisance which the proprietors of The CONSTITUTION are anxious to break up. City Court.

In the case of W. E. Gassett vs. the city of Atlanta, in a suit for damages occasioned by the plaintiff stepping in a hole in the sidewalk and injuring his knee, a verdict of one hundred and fity dollars was rendered.

The court adjourned until this morning. The jury was dism seed for the term.

turn loads consist of southern raw materials for the busy workshops of Ohio. Or edecade of years will suffice to make wild havoc in the forests of Kentucky and Tennessee. Will a small equivalent for damages be given in the shape of an honest effort for the development and settlement of the wild lands tributary to this road?

The railway centers of the south, Atlanta and Chattanooga, are deeply interested inthis subject. A lively shipping trade in hortcultural products would do no harm to either of the two aspiring towns. Their wild and uninviting suburbs will have to be improved sooner or later, and nothing will open the way for city improvements speedier and surer than gardens and orch, ards and vineyards clustering around a town. In these the idle juvenile population will find remunerative employment, and wages earned in this labor would give material assistance to many households of the needy cla es.
